

Melissa Thomas

Melissa draws on a unique combination of change strategy, marketing, and coaching experience in her roles at Nvolv. As a change strategist, she has worked with individuals and teams to help drive the transformation of organizations such as 7-Eleven, Jones Lang LaSalle, Kanbay, and Capgemini. In addition to this role, Melissa leads the marketing and business development efforts at Nvolv.

Melissa was director of marketing and business development for Brimstone Consulting Group, where she was responsible for driving overall sales and operations, customer relationship management, and marketing strategy. She also began her consulting career with Brimstone and ultimately garnered specializations in organizational transformation and leadership development.

In addition, Melissa served as manager of business development and content at The Wharton International Forum, a consortium of Japanese, European and North American multinationals focused on international business and culture. She was responsible for course design and facilitation, as well as managing new and existing client relationships.

She also worked in sales and marketing at AT&T, where she was responsible for selling voice and data services to middle market customers and managed several multi-million dollar global client relationships.

Melissa received a BA in Business from Texas A&M University, where she was a member of the Fellows Program, and earned her MA in International Relations from the University of Chicago. She now lives in the San Francisco Bay Area with her husband and two children.